

COURSE: BEWITCHING SHAKESPEARE - MACBETH LED BY EMMA REES

Friday 18th August to Sunday 20th August

In 1589, James VI of Scotland's future wife, Anne of Denmark, came perilously close to being shipwrecked. James was convinced that witchcraft lay behind the violent storms, and by the time he became King James I of England, he had been responsible for the execution of hundreds of innocent people - usually women - suspected of witchcraft.

Shakespeare's Macbeth – which was probably first performed for King James at Hampton Court Palace - has been bewitching audiences for more than four hundred years. In 'Bewitching Shakespeare' we'll be considering Macbeth in its early modern context, but also in terms of its startlingly modern resonances in the #MeToo era, in which the language of the 'witch hunt' has been crudely misappropriated. Whether you already love Shakespeare's plays, or whether they're a source of frustration to you, this will be a weekend of Shakespeare without fear, with just one play - Macbeth (c. 1606) - to read or watch in advance, and all other materials provided for you.

This course is led by Emma Rees, Gladstone's Library's Political Writer in Residence in 2016. She is professor of literature and gender studies at the University of Chester, and she has taught Shakespeare and Renaissance literature in universities for over 20 years. (Rates and timetable on reverse)
